EP.45 How to be a Successful Team Leader

True leaders are always wanting to be better! Being named a team leader does not make you a team leader, it must be earned.

Move from a time and effort economy into a results economy. If you are only working IN the business and not ON the business, you will never truly develop your skills as a leader.

Tips for being a successful team leader:

- Plan your calendar and block time to coach your team. If you don't do this, it won't happen!

- Schedule check-ins with the people on your team to go over numbers, discuss wins, and identify areas of improvement.

- Implement the FLOSS app. Visit www.StartFLOSSing.com for more information!

- Identify your team's individual strengths and give them ownership of certain processes that suit those strengths.

- Read books about leadership. There are so many great resources out there, but you have to look for ways to develop yourself outside of work. Check out Earl Nightingale's book, The Essence of Success. Start a monthly book club at your office!

- Ask for feedback from your team on how you can be a better leader. It might be tough to hear but it will only make you better.

If you are a team leader in your practice, spend some time thinking about ways you can develop your skills and be a better leader. It should be an ongoing process!
